Workshop outline

When talk is not enough. Expressive therapies incorporate the use of art, drawing, symbol work, collage and guided visitation to support clients to express their inner world. This training will contain a strong experiential component in order to ensure that participants develop a solid understanding of both client and practitioner experiences of expressive therapies.

What are expressive therapies?

Expressive therapies and trauma-informed practice

Implementing expressive therapies into a three-phase trauma recovery model of therapy

Developmental trauma and the need for self-expression
