

Sexual Assault Awareness Month seminar

TEACHING KIDS CONSENT

A workshop for parents of children and young people

Seminar outline

The topics covered in this seminar include:

- SASS and what we do
- General awareness raising
- Tasmanian Consent Law and tips for teaching consent to children
- Cultural drivers of sexual harm
- Protective behaviours for children and young people
- Tips for online safety for children and young people
- Q&A (including opportunity for anonymous questions)

Information

This workshop is an introductory session for adults interested in empowering children and young people with behaviours that enable them to recognise situations in which their personal space and sense of safety may be compromised.

Children are not responsible for 'protecting' themselves from harmful situations, however we can empower them to know what safety/safeness might look and feel like, provide them with strong language skills to ask for help if they need it, and to identify the safe people in their life.

These sessions are based on peer reviewed best practice, conducted in-line with BlueKnot Foundation trauma-informed principles, and embrace diversity and inclusiveness of all.

SASS Primary Prevention Training

In order to maintain a safe learning environment, our workshops can facilitate a maximum of 50 and minimum of 10 participants.

Our educators understand that there is likely to be a wide range of views, understandings, and backgrounds among participants.

SASS employ enthusiastic, skilled, and experienced facilitators. Our primary prevention educators are tertiary qualified and possess demonstrated skills working across a broad range of disciplines including trauma-informed care and practice, protective behaviours and working with survivors of sexual assault.
